CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC TO OPEN

A letter announcing the opening of a branch of the Lethbridge Conservatory of Music, has been received by The Enterprise this week, and this news will no doubt be of great interest to the music loving student in Blairmore and adjacent towns. Mr. J. Geo. Harper, who for the past seventeen years has been directing the Conservatory, stated that a teacher will be placed in charge of the Blairmore branch which will be permanent and in direct affiliation with the main Conservatory of Lethbridge. The regular high standard of Conservatory teaching will be introduced and all pupils will have the privilege to enter for examinations in the various grades. Instead of a student at heretofore, getting only one lesson each week, will have the benefit of two lessons one covering the theory of music, ear training, sight reading, and harmony, and the other lesson will embrace the Piano, Violin or practical subject preferred by the student.

The citizens and parents of our community should be congratulated on having Mr. Harper extend the branch to this city as the Conservatory will undoubtedly offer many advantages to the music student that is to be had in the main Conservatory — Piano-forte, Violin and Voice Culture with Theory, Harmony, Sight Reading, Etc., will be offered to the music student.

As soon as arrangements can be made, suitable studios will be opened. Representatives of the Conservatory are expected to be in Blairmore in the near future when application for enrolment with the Conservatory can be made. A special price will be made for the different courses which will enable one to re-

RADIO CONCERTS HEARD HERE

Several Blairmore people heard a "Radio Concert" for the first time in their lives last Friday evening when Mr. M. C. Browne and Mr. F. Hollingsworth, of Calgary, representing the Bruce Robinson Distributors of Calgary, connected up a receiving set to Orland Joyce's aerial. They are travelling through the three western provinces for the Calgary firm, demonstrating and taking orders for the radio and they give concerts where they can get a suitable aerial. They handle the Amrad and Marconi sets and the one used here was an Amrad, and concerts broadcasted from Great Falls, Tacoma and Seattle were heard, and also part of one from Avalon Beach, Catalina Island, California. The Calgary Alberian concert was also heard for a few moments, but was very indistinct. The first part of the evening was the best for later an amateur wireless operator in West Blairmore started practicing the Morse code and it spoiled the concert. A car went up and told him of the concert and he ceased interrupting and came down. After that all went fine and the concert went on until after midnight. A Magnavox was used and all the selections were heard very distinctly and were enjoyed by all present. It also tended to interest more people in radio, and we predict that in a short time there will be several sets in operation here.

ceive a splendid education in music at a reasonable cost. Recent examinations held at the Conservatory proved highly satisfactory to the director. Out of 51 applications, 49 were graduated with honors. For terms and particulars, address — Lethbridge Conservatory of Music, Lethbridge, Alta.

CITIZENS PROTEST PARKING BY-LAW

The regular meeting of the town council was held last Monday night, with a full attendance, with the exception of Mayor McLeod, who is ill. Deputy Mayor J. Angus McDonald occupied the chair in his absence. Accounts totalling $583.75 were passed for payment subject to the approval of the various committees.

The secretary-treasurer was instructed to negotiate with the West Canadian in regard to electric current on the basis of a 2½ cent rate.

A petition from business men and others was placed before the council calling for the repeal or amendment of by-law No. 77, relating to the parking of cars on Victoria Street. Councillor Morgan gave notice that at the next regular meeting he would introduce an amendment to the by-law.

A few other small matters of business were also disposed of by the council before adjourning.

Fiske Farm, Elba.

June 24th, 19—

In spite of Mrs. Arnold's prediction, I am not in a state of mental and physical collapse. Neither have I, since the time of my arrival here, slept in the floors, done the washing, milked twelve cows, cooked the dinner in a red-hot kitchen full of flies. In passing, I will say that Miss Fiske's kitchen is the coolest and most delightful room in the house, and as for flies—why, even one fly would give her nervousness.

To be exact, I have just finished correcting several Latin exercises for Miss Fiske—christened Orvette, known as Orvette on Sundays, and as Gipsy on week-days. That does not appear to me if were a plain-bred girl, does it?

I was listening with due attention to Mary's narrative lecture on Friday when a man who from Pergola made me jump in a manner most humiliating to one who prides herself on not lacking a spark of nerves.

"Get—here—Gipsy Fiske in the auto! Come on Reg." And the two boys, shouting a hearty welcome to the evidently very popular unknown, clattered up the stairs.

"Brother, my time is come," announced Mary solemnly. "This is positively your last chance to escape Elbow. If your heart fails you now, you will always be a Gipsy. I am unknown Gipsy that I am Miss Ellison Eliot—and I wonder how long they would stand me as a working companion."

"Don't be silly, Mary," I replied. "One would think to hear you that I am going into some awful danger."

"Mother is going to Ontario for a visit this summer," she began, "and she will not leave me without a weeping fit. I must be a companion as Gipsy Fiske aged and an automobile strike you as being dangerous?" she retorted.

"Come right in, Orvette," we heard Mrs. Mills's voice from the stairs. "The young ladies are in the sitting room. Mr. Eliot likes auto bonbons; do you think one of them would be good for him?"

"I am not sure, but I will say with perhaps a bit of a feather on it, I was always partial to red."

"Young ladies?" I questioned another voice.

"Hush—" replied Mrs. Mills as she opened the door.

"Gipsy, alias Orvette, Fiske deserves a paragraph to herself," he said. "My first thought when she entered the room behind Mrs. Fiske was that she was the handsomest girl I had ever seen—not pretty, really handsome, and adorable. When she left the greater part of the time for three days, I have not changed my mind. Why didn't

Mr. Hartford warn me, I wonder? She is taller than I. She has fine, I should say, hair, black, dark, shiny black, as are her eyebrows and lashes, and she has the thick creamy skin that men and women like best. Not a bit of it, but the bluest of blue. I am not sure that she is the prettiest girl I have ever seen, but she is certainly a good-looking woman, with which we three girls met each other. For a few minutes we discussed the various crop prospects, my imagined ones, and then I asked her if she had any news. Then I was time for Mary to go to the station.

Miss Fiske took us all to the station, where she had driven for herself. She said, "Mrs. Mills and I had the back one, and the twins were overjoyed to be allowed to ride on the running board. After Lington, however, was a trifling fresh. Miss Fiske's car was tritely verdant. I had time for only one gasp before we were at the station. Elba is a small town, and no accommodations are necessary, and the street was clean, so we did not break any plates of beef.

It is the custom in Elba for all the inhabitants thereof to see the east-bound train out of town. Mary says that she can not sympathize with such a custom, but Mrs. Fiske firmly kept Mrs. Mills and the boys occupied, so Mary and I were able to say good-bye in comparative privacy.

It was a very sorrowful moment after the train had carried Mary out of sight. The boys begged to sit in front and blow the horn, so Mrs. Mills gave them permission, and "Good-bye, my pretties," she said sympathetically under cover of the blood-curdling shriek of the siren: "You're all right with Arabella, an' Gypsey a real nice girl."

At five o'clock Miss Fiske and I left for the farm, which is four miles from Elba, and which consists of a cluster of the few trees I had seen, and I found that they follow the course of a little river known as "Livingstone's Creek." Miss Fiske drove slowly, as was natural, and when she stopped gave me a short history of the family that lived in it.

"But I can tell you, in spite of her age, she was not lacking in tact or sense. At last she blurted out:

"Miss Eliot, do you know what a working companion's duties are? I am glad to tell you, and here her courage failed her."

"Well," I replied, glad that the ice was broken. "I thought at one time that I had better learn now what I might have been mistaken. But I shall do my best, and perhaps your mother and I can make some satisfactory arrangement. I shall certainly do my best."

"The trouble is that Mother had very little to do with it," Miss Fiske answered. "I am the one responsible."

And then she told me how it was that they had advertised for a working companion rather than for a general maid.

"Mother is going to Ontario for a visit this summer," she began, "and she will not leave me without a weeping fit. I must be a companion as Gipsy Fiske aged and an automobile strike you as being dangerous?" she retorted.

"Come right in, Orvette," we heard Mrs. Mills's voice from the stairs. "The young ladies are in the sitting room. Mr. Eliot likes auto bonbons; do you think one of them would be good for him?"

"I am not sure, but I will say with perhaps a bit of a feather on it, I was always partial to red."

Laplanders' Fur Industry

People Have Been Destroyed Wild Deer for Ages

Laplanders, as far back as their history can be traced, lived on the native reindeer... These animals have furnished them with meat and milk, skins and clothing, with the means of transportation and the material for barter and exchange—in fact with all of the needs of their nomadic life. For ages past these people have been domesticating wild deer and raising herds of trained animals. With the development of civilization and its dependence on fur, however, the Laplanders' means of self-support and existence threatened. Realizing the danger in time, they split up their domesticated herds and firmly established their own and industry. They now have reindeer in plenty for their own needs and export, furnishing many of the Scandinavian and Russian cities with reindeer meat which commands a price about equal to the price of beef.

Stella Tells Her Brownies About Hermit Crabs

"WON'T you tell us some more about the under-the-sea world?" Pimzie asked the Wishing Fairy one day when they were all plimmed tired after so many games of leap frog and hide-and-go-seek. "We all love to hear about it, even though it is in a sense another world it somehow seems too strange and wonderful to be quite true."

"I suppose," Lorinsky added thoughtfully, "that is the reason we enjoy hearing about it. It is like a magic story. It is very interesting, and we all simply love to hear about it, even though it is in a sense another world it somehow seems too strange and wonderful to be quite true."

In order to avoid the perils of an thrax, the United States Government has passed a bill prohibiting importation and interstate commerce in brushes made of horsehair.

Foot and mouth disease has again broken out among animals in England, this being the worst outbreak yet reported to the Board of Agriculture. The peak had occurred in the Derbyshire area, where over 100 animals have been certified affected by the disease.

The House of Commons unanimously approved of the treaties passed at the Washington Disarmament Conference. The importance of the treaties was voiced by leaders of all the three parties in the House. They likewise expressed Canada's appreciation of President Harding in calling the conference.

Arabs Discovered Alcohol

Alcohol was first distilled by the Arabians, and when we talk about coffee and alcohol we are using Arabic words.

The infestations of worms are frequently—grinding of the teeth, picking of the nose, extreme peevishness, often convulsions. Under these conditions one of the best remedies is worm powders. These will attack the worms as soon as administered and they pass away in the evacuations. The little sufferer will be immediately eased and a return of the attack will not be likely.

Scientist Makes Discovery

Dr. Owens Says Dust Is From Other Worlds

The dust which is suspected to have come from other worlds has been discovered floating about over England. In his investigations, Dr. Owens, the adviser on atmospheric pollution to the Meteorological Office, has found some of this dust. Under the microscope the particles look round, transparent balls, like water droplets. It is possible that the air is from some active volcano, but if not volcanic, they must have descended upon the earth from outer space.

Micro photographs have been taken of this dust, as well as some dust which Dr. Owens believes travelled to this country from Germany. "This German dust," he said, "was blown over the east coast.

HOW TO BEST TREAT STOMACH TROUBLE

A Tonic Medicine is Needed to Strengthen the Stomach

The old-fashioned methods of treating stomach trouble are still in use. The trouble with the old-fashioned methods was that when the treatment was stopped the trouble returned.

The modern method of treating stomach trouble is to tone up the stomach and glands to their normal work.

The glands are from active volcano, but if not volcanic, they must have descended upon the earth from outer space.

Saskatchewan Brands Act

Many Brands Will Have to be Renewed this Year

A violation of the Brands Act, resulting in conviction and fine, is reported by the Saskatchewan provincial police to the Department of Agriculture for the province. The case occurred in Goodwater, and as it was a first offence and there were extenuating circumstances, the minimum fine of $50.00 was imposed, although the act provides for a maximum fine of $200.00.

W. F. Winstead, recorder of brands, Provincial Department of Agriculture, states that the act respecting brands is on the whole very well observed, as ranchers and farmers generally realize the benefit the livestock industry receives from an act which gives a man prima facie evidence in any court or tribunal in Saskatchewan of the ownership by the owner of any brand of the animal bearing the same brand.

Many brands have to be renewed this year, as the brands allotted in both 1916 and 1918 have to be renewed before December 31, 1922. In 1916 brands were issued for a six-year period, but the act was amended in 1918 when brands were allotted for four years, so that brands allotted in 1918 have to be renewed a year before the brands allotted in 1917.

Newspapers Help In Solving Problems

Minister of Interior Tells Association of Power of Press

At the convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association held in Ottawa recently, a number of interesting papers were read.

Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of the Interior, in an interesting address, said he wished to congratulate Mr. French on being president of such a fine body of people, who did so much to mould public opinion in the Dominion.

His slogan had always been business first and politics afterwards.

He found that this had not worked in Alberta during the last election, but he had not yet altered his opinion.

The association could do a lot to help him in his work as Minister.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic which through their action on the blood are helpful in building up the body and aiding the heart in the best remedy for simple or chronic cases of stomach trouble. The treatment is shown by case history of Mr. Joseph Lester of Wellington, P.E.I., who said I had been a great sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble, and nothing that I took for it did me any good until I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. So bad was I that I did not want to eat, and when I did take food it laid a weight on my stomach, often causing me to vomit. I saw an advertisement which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done in a similar case and began taking them with the result after a few days the pain was gone and six weeks I am feeling better than I have done for years. I have done for years.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50¢ a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Ont.

Young Men Have Advantages Over Older Men

Youthful immigrants, all other things being equal, is of greater value to a Dominion than one of mature age.

The adult immigrant is an asset with certain disadvantages from which a more youthful newcomer is almost, if not entirely, free.

The man of mature age who finds himself in a new country is faced with conditions that are novel to him, and the problem of assimilation presents a greater degree of difficulty.

As far as the country he has come to is concerned, he has fewer years of usefulness before him to the youth.

The boy or youth immigrant, from the moment of his arrival has many advantages, being in a state which more readily lends itself to building. His age should be regarded as a guarantee of many years of usefulness and he has not that mass of useless knowledge acquired with the years to be rid of or adjusted to the new environment.

BASEBALL

The Blairmore baseball team registered another win last night when they beat the Claresholm team in an exhibition game, by a score of 6-2. The game was to have been called at 6 o'clock, but owing to the rain it was nearly seven when it started. The locals held Claresholm scoreless for the first three innings, while they secured three in the first, two in the third and one in the fourth. The game had two exciting features—Brown's clean home run in the first with one man on and one double play by the locals—Pruden to Turner to Brown. The double play pulled them out of a bad hole for there was a manning house and one on second with only one down. Pruden pitched the full seven innings for the local team and was in danger only a couple of times but managed to pull himself out. Claresholm started Fredrickson in the box but the locals found his delivery so easy that he was yanked in the third and replaced by Burke. Fredrickson pitched part of a game for Blairmore last 1st of July sport and was responsible for them losing.

Score by Innings—
Claresholm 0 0 1 1 0 0—
Blairmore 3 0 2 1 0 0 x-6
Batters—Claresholm, Fredrickson and Burke and Walker; Blairmore, Pruden and Brown.
Umpires—I. Morgan and A. Oleson.

CHAUTAUQUA

The fourth day at Chautauqua was as interesting and enjoyable as the previous ones and the attendance was also good. Emory Parnell, the one-man-band, and William H. Stout, were the attractions for the afternoon and both were greatly appreciated. In the evening, Mr. Parnell again entertained the audience and Moritz G. Hindus, the Russian lecturer, gave a most interesting and instructive talk on the Russian situation, the way they live, their habits and what they are trying to accomplish. He was very well voiced on his subject and delivered the lecture in a very capable manner.

Patrons were allowed to take a rest on the fifth afternoon to prepare for the three act English comedy, "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," which was played that night by the Reed Metropolitan Players. The play was thoroughly enjoyed and a record crowd were in attendance.

The last day was probably the best of the entire week. In the afternoon Chief Strongheart gave a fine outline of the Indians in his lecture entitled "From Peace Pipe to War Trail and Back Again." Those present were greatly pleased with his lecture. The evening performance was undoubtedly the most enjoyable of the whole Chautauqua, being presented by Davis, the Master Magician and he certainly mystified the audience with his tricks, which were indeed so numerous that we will not endeavor to try and explain any one of them. They were very amusing to both the old and young who attended.

Summing up the Chautauqua program this year we find that it is one of the strongest they have produced since the organization came to life some five years ago. It was not what one could call a success financially, but outside of that there was not a single thing lacking which goes to show that the Chautauqua tries at all times to please the public. The arena, in the public opinion, was far more comfortable than the tent, and it was not as expensive to the committee.

WORLD'S FASTEST AUTO WILL BE AT CALGARY RACES

CALGARY, June 28th.—The fastest automobile in the world, Sig Haugdahl's three mile a minute Wisconsin Special, will be among the attractions at the Calgary Exhibition, which commences Friday, as the result of arrangements made by the management with the newly crowned speed king.

The giant 270 horse power machine is to be on display throughout Exhibition week and on Thursday and Friday, auto race days, it is to be driven in the time trials during the speed contests, when new world's records on circular tracks will be sought by the half score of nationally known drivers who will be in Calgary for the racing events.

The big machine which Haugdahl is bringing to Calgary travelled one mile in 18.97 seconds, three miles a minute, or at the rate of 180.27 miles an hour, the greatest speed ever made by a human being on land or water. A huge hydroplane motor, built entirely of aluminum furnishes the power for this unique machine. The body of the car is twenty inches wide and is streamlined in every detail to reduce wind resistance. It is expected to be one of the biggest attractions of the exhibition.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

A man so ornate that he can enjoy his own cooking ought to have to eat it.

Many things that you consider hard luck would seem like good luck to others.

A St. Louis woman had a man arrested for kissing her. Nothing like advertising.

There would be more people at the top if it wasn't so easy to slide back again.

A woman is likely to think it too sudden when the ballot says "vote yes" or no."

Then only reason some women do not wear trousers is because of their inborn modesty.

A step-mother never does make an extraordinary hit with the relatives of her step-children.

The local Oddfellows and Rebekahs held memorial services last Sunday, and a goodly number were in attendance. The procession left the hall at 3 p.m. and marched to the cemetery, where W. H. Chappell, P.G., acting as Chaplain, conducted the service at the graves of members buried there. Mrs. Jas. Patterson, Noble Grand of the local Rebekah lodge, conducted the service for that branch of the Order. After placing flowers on the graves of the deceased brethren and sisters, the parade returned to the hall and disbanded.

A special sitting of the district court presided over by Judge McDonald, of Macleod, was held here on Tuesday, the 20th, at which the case of Picarriello and Rota vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway was heard. This case arose last June when the truck of Mr. Picarriello, driven by Tony Rota, was smashed by the switch engine at the crossing next to the station.

Mr. D. G. MacKenzie, acted for Picarriello and Rota and the C. P. R. was represented by Mr. G. A. Walker, assisted by Mr. J. E. Gillis.

Judgment was reserved.

The raw recruit was on sentry duty for the first time. All went well until he saw someone approaching.

"Hal! Who goes there?" he cried.
"Officer of the day," was the reply. The officer had no gun for when the challenge was again given.

"What next will you do?" roared the officer.

"Never you mind what I'm going to do," replied the recruit. "My orders is to call 'Hal!' three times, and then shoot!"

Work was commenced this week on the brick walls to the Corner Association addition. The foundation work on the business building also started this week.

We regret that an error was made last week when we referred to statements made by Mr. Kenmire, of Pincher Creek. In the article the nickname of one who is in no way connected with the statements was used viz., "Heriot John." This is not Mr. Kenmire's handle and we apologize for its being mixed up in the article.

NOTICE

THE DROUGHT AREA RELIEF ACT

The Drought Area Relief Act has been passed to enable persons residing in certain areas of Southern Alberta and their creditors to adjust their accounts, and to prevent the dissipation of the resources of needy residents by a multiplicity of legal proceedings.

Any person who has been resident and actively engaged in farming operations in such drought area for at least one year prior to January 1st, 1922, and is still resident, and engaged in farming can come within the provisions of the Act.

The duty of the Commissioner is to endeavor to adjust matters between residents in the said area and their creditors so as to provide for the satisfaction of just claims.

Any resident farmer within the drought relief area, or any creditor of such resident farmer, can apply to the Commissioner for an enquiry and an adjustment of his affairs.

It is recommended that applications be forwarded at once, as if there any delay the detail work necessary in the adjustment of each account cannot be completed in time after the crop is harvested.

Any resident farmer, or creditor, failing to make application before August 15th, next does so at his own risk as it may not be possible to get the necessary help and complete enquiries after that date.

Applications for such relief, and to come under the provisions of the Act, should be made at once, in writing, to the Commissioner, Drought Area Relief Act, 320 Longfellow Building, Calgary, so that steps can be taken to make necessary inquiry.

For further particulars apply to

WEEKLY PROVINCIAL NEWS BULLETIN

New Labor Commissioner

Announcement has been made by Hon. Alex. Ross, minister of public works and labor, of the appointment of Walter Smitton, of Calgary, to be commissioner of labor for Alberta, under the act passed at last session creating a labor bureau. Mr. Smitton will assume his duties at once. His first duties will be to organize the bureau of labor. It is the object of the government to co-ordinate all labor legislation which will come under the jurisdiction of the new department. Mr. Smitton has been secretary of the Alberta Federation of labor for a number of years, and is known as one of the best authorities in the province and in the dominion on labor matters. He has been a member of several boards of conciliation and was a member of the minimum wage board of the province.

Hon. Geo. Headley, minister of agriculture, accompanied by S. G. Carnegie, livestock commissioner, will visit points in Minnesota and Wisconsin shortly to select two Holstein bulls which will be placed on government farms. Mr. Headley also expects to go to Ottawa to take up several matters of importance, including the question of grading hogs which was to have started this year.

Trip for Members

A trip for some of the northern members of the legislature and northern residents through the Southern Alberta Irrigation Districts and other parts of the south, is being planned by Hon. Geo. Headley to take place towards the end of July.

E. S. Bishop, recently appointed commissioner under the liquor act, has left for the east where he will conduct an investigation into the

STRUCK IN EYE BY GOLF BALL

As he turned his head when attracted by a call of "Fore" at the Municipal golf links on Tuesday afternoon, Allen McCaw, of Kehl and McCaw, local restaurant keepers, was struck in the right eye by a golf ball and painfully injured. He was wearing glasses at the time and the ball smashed the lens, resulting in small particles of the glass penetrating the wound. Though the eyeball was gashed, the eyeball was not cut, but severely bruised.

Dr. Salmon, who was on the course at the time, attended the injury and succeeded in removing the glass from the cut. Mr. McCaw was examined by Dr. Hackney, eye specialist later in the evening and it is believed that the optic will not suffer any serious effect, though he is receiving further examination Wednesday afternoon.

The incident happened between the fourth and fifth green. A lady was driving about 50 yards away with a brassie and sliced the ball, catching Mr. McCaw straight in the eye as he turned on the player's warning.

Only a short time afterwards, Jas.

Miller, chief train dispatcher, C. P. R., was struck on the back of the head by a fast-travelling golf ball, driven by a player from the green behind. He received a painful blow on the head and was forced to leave the course.

The members of the Blairmore golf club should be extremely careful before playing their ball to see that the players in front of them are well out of reach, as any player can be very severely injured, perhaps for life, by being struck with a golf ball played by a careless player.

The rule in golf is, that before a player plays his or her ball, it becomes their duty to see that the players in front of them are sufficiently far away that all possibility of a ball reaching them is precluded. This very important rule should be very strictly observed by members of the Blairmore Golf Club, and as we have a number of players who are not observing this rule, this timely warning is being extended to them because should a person be struck and injured by a golf ball, the party playing this ball can be held liable for damages.

Plowing Matches

Very successful plowing matches were held during the past week or so at Vermillion, Lamont and Lacombe, in which there was a considerable number of contestants. The matches were held under the auspices of the department of agriculture. Several more are being planned.

Freight Rate Reductions

As announced from Ottawa, the special committee of the House of Commons on freight rates has decided upon the suspension of the Crown's Nest agreement for one year, and has agreed upon the offer of the railway companies for a reduction of rates on grain of about 20 per cent, and on other basic commodities of 16.66 per cent. Premier Greenfield and A. Chard, freight supervisor of the provincial government, who have returned from Ottawa after giving evidence before the special committee, believe that the decision will result in a considerable benefit to the farmers of the west, and express hope for a further reduction later on.

A. Chard, freight supervisor of the government, has been taking up the matter of rates on shipments of fish from northern Alberta points, and hopes to be able to secure a reduction of the surcharge on Alberta shipments, which it is claimed operates to the disadvantage of shipments from Alberta.

New pamphlets on Practical Irrigation and Summerfallow have been issued by the department of agriculture.

Western Rye Grass Proving Very Important To Prairie Farmers

The importance of western rye grass to the farmers of Western Canada is comparable to that of timothy in the east, and the fact that this native grass is found in a wild state in a large number of forms makes it a promising species for study by agricultural scientists says The Agricultural Gazette of Canada. The experts of the Dominion Order of Capitains have also given it their attention, and the results that are likely to follow their investigations promise to be of great practical importance. In his report for 1920-21, Dr. M. O. Maile, until recently the Dominion agronomist, announces the discovery that this grass is normally self-fertilized, whereas grasses in general are open-fertilized. The fact that wheat is self-fertilized has made possible the production by scientific breeding of improved varieties such as Marquis. Now that it has been established that western rye grass is normally self-fertilized, it will be comparatively easy for the hybridist to originate countless new varieties which will be constant in their characteristics to other varieties with breed true to type. For the work the plant breeder already has at hand in nature a large number of different types of this grass to work with. By combining and recombining the various characteristics found in them, new varieties can be produced, which will remain constant from one generation to another, and from which selections may be made. In the pursuance of this work a number of wild forms have been collected from practically all of the provinces. Plots from these were established, with the result that last year some 150 lots of western rye grass were being grown at Ottawa for the purpose of studying their relative productiveness. In 1920, seven varieties were sent for further test to the prairie farmers, while in 1921 five additional varieties were sent out to the same farms.

Between these varieties an astonishing difference in yielding power has been already observed. The fact that, in 1920, one gave only 12 pounds 5 ounces of straw and seed from 300 plants, while another produced 109 pounds 5 ounces will indicate the wide range of productiveness. Results for 1921 are not complete, but the difference in yielding capacity of various varieties was even more striking. It is well within the mark to say that the maximum yields were more than five times as great as yields of varieties commonly grown. An effort is made by the Dominion chemist to determine the varieties having the highest percentage of nutritive constituents show that the difference in this respect is also very marked. The inference is that by the simple propagation of the high yielding variety and its introduction to agriculture the increase in productiveness of this valuable plant would correspond; and it should be mentioned that one variety which showed up particularly well in 1920 was sown in 1921 in a field plot for seed propagation. The field of cross-breeding has not yet been entered upon, but apart from that, the above facts are in themselves of the greatest significance to western farming.

Damaged Wheat Brings Good Price
Hundreds of farmers in Saskatchewan have come into good fortune for thousands of dollars will be salvaged from the apparently ruined crops of last year. The damaged wheat, not considered worth threshing last fall because of low prices, is now being threshed and the results surprisingly good, the grain grading Nos. 3 and 4 Northern. Spring threshing has been carried on to a considerable extent in other years but the volume this year will probably exceed any year in the history of the province.

Converting Potatoes into Motor Fuel
Tests will be made at Edmonton to determine the feasibility of converting Alberta grown potatoes into motor fuel. Many farmers in the neighbourhood of Forest Heights have large quantities of potatoes on their hands and this remedy has been suggested as a means of relieving the situation. In Germany and elsewhere from 22 to 25 gallons of alcohol have been produced from a ton of potatoes, the tubers showing an average of from 10 to 20 per cent of starch.

Want Standard School Books

United Order of Canadians Request Use of Dominion Authors' Works

A resolution calling for the standardization of the text books used in Canadian schools was unanimously adopted by the United Order of Capitains at a banquet in Regina.

The resolution was to the effect that the organization is strongly of the opinion that the text books used in the public and high schools of Canada on such subjects as literature and history, should be uniform and that a considerable portion of the selections in the school reader should be drawn from the prose and poetry of Canadian authors. The resolution added that the order noted with great satisfaction that the departments of education in the various provinces are taking steps in this direction. It further recommended that Canadian colleges and universities put on at least one course in literature which should deal with the works of native authors.

A copy of this resolution is to be presented to the Minister of Education in every Canadian province. The passage of the resolution followed a talk given by Professor Allison, Winnipeg, of the English Department of Manitoba University. He spoke on the value of educating foreign-born children, and the children of foreign-born parents, along Canadian lines, and thus causing them to grow up loyal citizens of Canada.

Whale World Invited

Nations Can Appeal to Court of International Justice

A notable decision has reached when the council of the league of nations threw open the court of international justice to the whole world, ruling that Russia, Germany, Turkey, Hungary and Mexico, the only countries which heretofore had been excluded from its benefits, could bring cases before the court. The only condition imposed was that the nations in question agree to accept the decisions of the court and not to declare war over the disputes in question. Little by little the world is coming to recognize something beyond the limits of personal aggrandizement, and nations one by one, are learning to accept some of the privileges associated with being "my brother's keeper."—Canadian Science Monitor.

The Queer Greek

Everything in Country Done Contrary to Usual Way

The modern Greek has his own queer way of doing things. For instance, the Greek who wishes to call himself a "gentleman" or "gentlewoman," which anywhere else in the world would be interpreted as a sign to go away. When he actually does wish his friend to go away, he beckons. When one arrives in a Greek city he must not expect people to call on him, but must do all the calling first himself. And in addressing an envelope the Greek puts the "Esquire" before the name instead of after it.

But strangest of all is the fact that when a Greek says "nay" he means "yes." In almost all other languages the word beginning with "n" is the negative. But in Greek the affirmative is "nay," the same word as the English one with exactly the opposite meaning.

Need Help of Men

Women Seek Sympathy, Not Criticism, from Men, Says Miss Joan Arnold

Addressing the Canadian Club at Vancouver, Miss Joan Arnold said: "Women need the help of men who are to become good citizens; you must act as our elder brothers in the school of life. We want your sympathy and assistance, not your criticism."

Some women, she proceeded, think they are going to remake the world at once, but the men and women who have thought about the matter know this is not to be the case.

"Most of us know we must look to you for help. Not that we think you men have made such a great fist of running the country, but you are all we have to look up to," the speaker concluded amid laughter and applause.

Will Extend Railway

Contracts have been awarded for extending the Lacombe and North-Western Railway a distance of twelve miles from its present terminus.

The road serves a prosperous and well-settled agricultural district and the extension is necessary to afford better transportation facilities.

Canada's Oldest Industry

Annual Harvest of Wealth from the Fur Trade

There is only one industry which is peculiarly Canadian. It is the fur industry. Just now the skins which the trappers have taken during the winter are being sent to the trading centers of the towns of Montreal, Ottawa, Edmonton and Vancouver, and by this time the traders and the hunters in the north will know how their balance sheets stand. For in no industry are returns so fluctuating as in the fur business.

Some indication of the deflation in the market value of furs is graphically illustrated in a report just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on "Fur Production in Canada, 1920-21." The very high prices which prevailed in 1919-20 resulted in a value of the fur product of that year of $21,357,005, whereas last year the output was valued at $10,151,594. This is an actual decrease in value of nearly 50 per cent., for the number of pelts is only slightly less.

According to "Natural Resources" for May there were 2,936,407 pelts of wild fur-bearing animals, against 2,600,000 in 1919-20. Beaver was the principal pelt marketed in bulk value, 161,856 skins accounting for $16,847. Muskrat, muskrat pelts, worth $1,000,000, was the next in value, 161,856 skins accounting for $130,130. Foxes, with six classified species, remained the highest priced furs, and silver fox, the aristocrat of the fur-bearers, bringing $151.99 for a single pelt.

From the foregoing it will be seen that an enormous toll is taken annually of Canada's wild animals in order to supply the fashions of the world. Nearly three million skins every season means that the greatest care must be taken to observe the laws for the protection of these creatures and those governing hunting and trapping. If this is done, they will continue to give this annual harvest of wealth. For three hundred and fifty years man has formed the basis of Canada's oldest industry. It can go on for three hundred and fifty years more if humane and intelligent precautions are taken to give the animals at least a square deal in this old and romantic province.—Ottawa Citizen.

Hard to Climb Everest

Thinness of Air Greatest Obstacle to Combat

The gallant band of men who are attempting to climb the summit of Mount Everest, the world's highest peak, will encounter dangers and difficulties of many kinds. A Canadian doctor, an expert mountaineer, is with the party this year.

The altitudes to which they want to climb—Everest is 29,000 ft.—are, of course, perpetually cold, and they have a greater obstacle to combat in the thinness of the atmosphere.

The effects of the shortage of oxygen in the air are felt in many ways. Nothing can live without breathing apparatus to make up for the lack of oxygen in rarified atmosphere. But some scientists think that at high altitudes a man's powers are so impaired that he would be unable to carry the load.

It is true that, with the gas in cylinders, airmen have risen to very great heights, but it must be remembered that aviators are not called upon for great exertion. When he actually does wish his friend to go away, he beckons. When one arrives in a Greek city he must not expect people to call on him, but must do all the calling first himself. And in addressing an envelope the Greek puts the "Esquire" before the name instead of after it.

When a Greek says "nay" he means "yes." In almost all other languages the word beginning with "n" is the negative. But in Greek the affirmative is "nay," the same word as the English one with exactly the opposite meaning.

Another effect of the rare atmosphere is to cause water and other liquids to boil at much lower temperatures than at sea level, so that mountaineers find that the higher they climb the harder it is to make tea and coffee, or to cook food. Water boils before it is hot enough to cook anything.

The lack of oxygen also makes breathing very difficult. Climbers need easily digestible food in very small and frequent quantities.

You may wonder why the attempt to climb Everest has not been made before. The reason is that the mountain is not an isolated peak, but is surrounded by high land for hundreds of miles, much more than the flying radius of aircraft.

This means that, although a plane could easily fly to the height of Everest, it could not fly towards it without alighting on this high land to refill its petrol tanks.

And when that had been done the plane, thanks to rarified air—would be unable to take off again. For although the air of the surrounding ranges will support a plane in flight, it is not dense enough to "take off" in. The problem would, in effect, skid in every direction.

Contracts have been awarded for extending the Lacombe and North-Western Railway a distance of twelve miles from its present terminus.

The road serves a prosperous and well-settled agricultural district and the extension is necessary to afford better transportation facilities.

Some Queer Cargoes

Oddest on Record Was Two Million Gallons of Water

The oddest cargo recorded, according to a London paper, was probably that carried lately by a British steamer bound for Morocco.

It consisted of some two million gallons of water, a disease of fifteen hundred mules sounds too absurd, but the master becomes clearer when we are told that the water was specially purified drinking water for the use of the Spanish troops fighting the rebels in Morocco.

Another cargo sent to Spain consisted of an immense quantity of bank notes. There were several millions of these, most of them of small value. It is testimonial to British printing that Spain gave such an order, and is due to the fact that notes printed in Spain have been so largely counterfeited.

A master stevedore working at the Albert Docks, London, recently received compensation for being hit by a lighted cigarette which was dropped by two persons and never derived entirely from the gaming tables at Monte Carlo. It flies under its own flag, is issue of its own coinage (only one hundred franc pieces, however), which is accepted in all Latin countries, and also its postage stamps.

A master stevedore working at the Albert Docks, London, recently received compensation for being hit by a lighted cigarette which was dropped by two persons and never derived entirely from the gaming tables at Monte Carlo.

In court the judge asked the reason for sending old horse shoes out of the country. Counsel told him that they were made into spades, a purpose for which they were specially suitable. Speaking of export to the east, there is a certain English firm which, in the course of its ordinary business, produces large quantities of waste spelter and lead. This material is melted up, run into moulds, and exported in the form of images of various eastern gods, bringing $151.99 for a single pelt.

Richest Man in Ireland

Lord Pirie Says Pluck is Worth More Than Luck

An ounce of pluck is worth a ton of luck. This is the favorite maxim of Lord Pirie, the rich Englishman, his husband, who celebrated his seventieth birthday today. Beginning life as a shipboard apprentice, he now controls 30,000 men and is regarded as the leading shipbuilder in the world. He was born in Quebec, the son of Irish emigrants. His father died when the future shipping magnate was an infant and the mother returned with the boy to her old home in Ireland. At the age of 15 the lad entered the employ of the great Belfast shipbuilding firm of Harland & Wolff, and when only seventeen-and-twenty was made a partner. In due course he became chief owner of the firm, as well as a director in great railway, shipping, railways, banks and other big enterprises. Lord Pirie has served as Mayor of Belfast and has had many other honors bestowed upon him.

Chinese Reverence

Their Ancestors

Two Days Each Year Set Apart for Worship

Almost every Chinese home has its "ancestral shrine" in which are kept the ancestral tablets. These tablets are made of wood or stone or marble, according to the financial circumstances of the family, and inscribed thereon are the names, titles, dates of birth and death of deceased ancestors and the names and degrees of relatives of their nearest living descendants. Twice a year, on the birthday and deathday of the departed, ceremonies, consisting chiefly of obsequies before the tablets, are held. The dead are buried in the ground. The spirit of the departed resides in it, but rather that it is a symbol to be remembered and respected by the living; and the days set apart for "worship" are no more religious than is remembrance of the dead.

World's Largest Plane

French Machine Will Carry Twenty Passengers and Luggage

What is claimed to be the world's greatest biplane has just concluded final tests at the Orly aerodrome and will shortly begin trans-European flights. It may be used in a new attempt to cross the Atlantic in the late summer.

For purposes of safety, the machine is not an isolated peak, but is surrounded by high land for hundreds of miles, much more than the flying radius of aircraft.

According to the airmen, Boussois, the well known pilot of the Goliaths who will fly the giant, it will be able to maintain a speed of 100 miles an hour while carrying 20 passengers and luggage, a total load exceeding seven tons. Although designed for passenger service, experts who investigated the machine at the Salon d'Aviation, stated that it would be an ideal weapon for bombing cities from a great height.

Midget European Kingdoms

Preserve Their Independence Through Many Centuries

There are several little independent states in Europe and they are startlingly anachronisms in their way, for they have somehow managed to preserve their identity and escape absorption by their powerful neighbors all down the long centuries during which the continent of Europe has been swept time and again by successive waves of war and revolution.

But so diminutive are they and of such a sturdy independence that it is difficult not to just a little amused at them. They do suggest baby states at being empire.

Take Monaco, for instance, and its eight square miles of territory, its delightful harbor, its famous fog, two towers and a revenue derived entirely from the gaming tables at Monte Carlo. It flies under its own flag, issue of its own coinage (only one hundred franc pieces, however), which is accepted in all Latin countries, and also its postage stamps.

A master stevedore working at the Albert Docks, London, recently received compensation for being hit by a lighted cigarette which was dropped by two persons and never derived entirely from the gaming tables at Monte Carlo.

In court the judge asked the reason for sending old horse shoes out of the country. Counsel told him that they were made into spades, a purpose for which they were specially suitable. Speaking of export to the east, there is a certain English firm which, in the course of its ordinary business, produces large quantities of waste spelter and lead. This material is melted up, run into moulds, and exported in the form of images of various eastern gods, bringing $151.99 for a single pelt.

The prince was an absolute monarch up to 1911, but in that year he granted a constitution to his subjects and is now assisted in the care of state by a prime minister and a council of state. His diplomatic representatives are received at the court of all the sovereign states of Europe.

Then there is Liechtenstein on the borders of Switzerland and Austria, which, however, is very extensive, not to say far flung, by comparison with Monaco, for it has an area of quite sixty-five square miles. Its size is not grandeur and territory but size is not grandeur and territory and does not make a nation," as Professor Huxley once put it, and there are points about this diminutive state which are equally well calculated to make it the object of a large and powerful state, for it has no public debt and no standing army, the inhabitants, who numbered more than ten thousand in 1912, being exempt from all military service.

The principal is hereditary in the male line and, like Monaco, the state has been ruled by one family for over a thousand years. Several times in the course of its history it has been under foreign control and indeed joined the German Confederation in 1866. Just as Monaco has the same customs as France, so Liechtenstein is allied by treaty to Switzerland as regards customs, posts and telegraphs. The fifteen members are elected on the basis of universal suffrage and proportional representation, so it is quite up-to-date in spite of the fact that the capital Vaduz has a population of only one thousand.

San Marino, in Central Italy, perch'd on a high, rugged rock and approached by one single road only, claims to be the oldest state in Europe, which, however, is disputed. It certainly has been independent since the early part of the seventeenth century, and it probably met with very little outside interference for many a hundred years previous to that. A republic of thirty-eight square miles, the reign of government is in the hands of a grand council of sixty members, and here again there is no national debt. But it has an army, the present strength of which is thirty-nine officers and 950 men. Tradition relates exist between San Marino and Great Britain, Belgium, Holland and the United States.

What is known of San Marino and most certainly the most interesting of all these curious political survivals is Andorra, the "Valley of Andorra," to give the official designation of a little state at the heart of the Pyrenees, situated amidst some of the most magnificent mountain scenery in Europe. It is larger than the others, having an area of 175 square miles and a population of about six thousand, and until the Trans-Pyrenean railway penetrated there a year or two ago, was shut in by mountains and difficult access that century after century passed without working any change, in the archives, which are said to go back to Charlemagne's time, are kept "Cupboard in the wall of the prime little town," San Marino.

It is more a seigniority than a republic, being under the protection both of the French Government and the Bishop of Urgel, paying an annual levy to the former of 40 pounds and to the latter 18 pounds, but it is nevertheless recognized as an independent state, although it has no diplomatic representatives. It has, too, its own national flag. The government consists of a council of twenty-four persons. The posts and telegraphs are under French control, though the coinage is Spanish, the language spoken being Catalan. There are no customs, and if rumor is to be believed, nothing is the chief industry of the inhabitants.

For eleven hundred years the people of these valleys have managed their own affairs, have led an independent life, and have quoted their own customs and their own laws. Now that a railway has arrived, who can tell what is going to happen, and they themselves feel that change is at hand. It is only wonderful that these little states should have managed to preserve their independence in any form for so long.

Rural Advancement

Rural Civilization as Effective and SATISFYING to Young Life as Urban

Progress of rural life, like other progress, must come with urbanization rather than from without. The backward rural areas often inherit a more or less a cry from another direction. It is designed as a relief to the overburdened industries of the cities. It throws up a request for people to provide sustenance for people in temporary distress. That is not the way to build up a strong rural life.

"The real country life movement," says G. W. Fliske, in a study of country life opportunity, "is a campaign for rural progress conducted mainly by rural people, not a paternalistic plan on the part of city folk for rural redemption."

The contention is that rural civilization should become just as effective and satisfying to young life as urban. The urban civilization has, start in this matter. The social trend has been to the cities. The gravitation into the adjacent villages and towns; the towns into the cities. Men like to follow the crowd. That, it will be easily discerned, is poor business, unless there is some higher motive than the simple desire to go where the crowd is.

In the more mature and experienced social thought of today the true method of rural development is bound to be discerned. The country residents must help themselves. They must work out their own salvation to a large extent. Those who go among them as teachers and leaders of various professions must become rural-minded in their interest and not look upon country life as a makeshift or a "stepping stone" to something else, but as life's calling, worthy of the best service.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Night Air Purest

Actual Tests Show More Bacteria in Daylight Hours

The purer night air is night air. Actual tests have proved again and again that the bacteria count in night air is lower, lower than that in the air during daylight hours when the activities of the world are at full height and the maximum of dirt is active. Yet, despite this demonstrated scientific fact, so deeply rooted is the fear of the "cold, damp night air" that thousands are fearful of letting it into their sleeping rooms during the winter months. Of course, during the summer weather the question regulates itself, but during the winter the hoodoo of the night air stalks triumphantly. It would be amazing, if it were not so serious, how this night air notion has got deeply into the convictions of people, and how difficult it is to remove it. Instead of throwing down a window and letting in the pure winter air, thousands in closed windows remain shut, breath over and over the shivering, shuddering, disease-bearing air by the waste of their own bodies. It is little wonder that we have so many colds.—Ottawa Journal.

Have Organized Seed Centre

With the object of producing high-class seed grain to carlot quantities for sale to outside points, 45 farmers in the Birtle district have organized a seed centre, according to the Provincial Minister of Agriculture. It is proposed to install cleaning machinery, to standardize the grain and sell it to Manitoba wheat producers or through country agents in Minnesota and the Dakotas where Manitoba seed is in steady demand.

HIGHWAY TO WATERTON LAKES

Mr. Ross, the provincial minister of public works, Mr. Robertson, the deputy minister and Mr. Dimdale, the Alberta road commissioner, were in Pincher Creek recently investigating the question of making a Dominion Trunk Highway to Waterton Lakes Park. The matter was quickly settled and the district engineer given orders to start at once on the roads, the highway to be from Macleod to Crow's Nest and from Pincher Creek to the boundary of Waterton Park.

This means that Pincher Creek will receive Dominion aid, as well as provincial, in the making and the up-keep of this highway.

Word of the above first reached Cardston on Monday being brought by Mr. Keith, Lethbridge, Road Commissioner for this constituency, and an announcement also appeared in the Lethbridge Herald of the same date.

That Cardston has been ignored in the selection of the Dominion Highway route, caused considerable comment, in view of the fact of our close proximity to the Park, and a special meeting of the Board of Trade was

TIMELY HINTS TO CAR OWNERS

Expert Advice for Better Summer Service Given By Mr. L. Morgan.

With the approach of the hot summer season and the wider use of cars in touring, a few hints to owners as to the care of their automobiles will be timely, says Mr. Morgan, local Studebaker dealer.

While it is a good plan to have one's car gone over thoroughly by competent mechanics, there are certain points that every car owner can look after himself.

The radiator has to be filled often because water evaporates more quickly in hot weather. At intervals it should be flushed out.

Be sure your fan belt is properly adjusted.

In order to assure proper cooling of the motor during hot months, the spark lever should be kept in an advanced position.

Parts such as spring shackles, wheel bearings, steering connections and universal joints should be oiled frequently to save wear and insure smoother operation.

Use a heavier grade of lubricating oil in the motor, transmission and differential. The oil should be drained from the motor at intervals not to exceed every 1,000 miles.

The carburetor should be adjusted for summer driving so that the mixture will be leaner than in cold weather. Only an expert, however, should look after this.

Brakes should be carefully inspected to make sure that they are in good condition for they are put to greater usage on city streets and country roads alike in the summer.

The owner should remember that tires expand more in hot weather and therefore the pressure should be taken by gauge about one week, particularly if tires have been in use for any length of time.

Before starting on a long tour the tool equipment should be checked up and any tools that have been lost replaced.

The instruction book is the car owner's best friend, and no owner should be without it. He should follow the suggestions it gives regarding ing the car, remembering that everything in the book is placed there in order that he may get the most efficient service from his car. After three hours of hard, steady running a locomotive is gone over carefully. Yet there are automobile owners who expect their cars to run smoothly month in and month out without attention.

When in doubt, make use of the service stations. Instruction books are explicit, and yet there is certain work on a car which the novice is not capable of performing and which, therefore, requires the attention of experts. An owner should never tinker with what he doesn't understand.

In general, an inventory should be taken of the car before starting on a trip. Inspection should be made to determine that there is sufficient water in the radiator, oil in the motor and oil and grease in other parts specified in the instruction book. Serious results can follow lack of sufficient oil and water.

THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER

The local newspaper must always be the mainstay of any advertising campaign designed to catch the eye of the masses of the people—the buying public. By no other means can so large a proportion of the best trade of the community be reached. The local merchant should not get this idea:

"Oh, my dear fellow, I cannot lay off my clerk without losing him; I cannot change my location without losing it; I cannot suspend my insurance without losing my protection—but advertising, that is different! Advertising is like a faithful dog, I can kick him into the street whenever I feel like it and he wags his tail, and comes when I want to wipe my feet upon him."

This is not true.

Advertising is not different. It is a great force in business and many great and many foolish claims are made for it, but it is not greater, nor more powerful than any other factor of the business. If the goal is to come from it must be kept on the go.

The local merchant should set aside a definite sum to be spent in a year. His expenditure should be based upon a percentage of last year's business and he should spend it systematically. Don't let the question of "copy" frighten him to death, but let him get the idea that "copy" is not the main thing to advertising. To be sure there's a great difference in the effectiveness of advertisements; but if we will forget all about fine writing or being smart and clever; if we will forget the big sounding pat phrases which have been used so often that they mean nothing, and sit down and talk to the people of his community about his store and his stock and service, he will write a good ad without knowing it.

Is there any good reason in the world why the local people should buy the merchandise he sells. Let him tell them the reason; and tell them again and keep on telling them. That is advertising—good advertising. Has he anything in stock that Mrs. Jones or Miss Smith or Mrs. Brown would be interested in? Let him tell them about it, and tell them about something else next week, and keep on telling them, until they know beyond doubt that he has just about the "niftiest" stock of merchandise ever brought together in his neck of the woods. That's advertising—good advertising.

And it will pay.—The Business Printer.

Sir Henry Wilson Murdered On Doorstep Of His London House

London.—Field Marshal Sir Henry H. Wilson, one of England's most illustrious soldiers, who was chief of the Imperial staff during the final stages of the world war, was assassinated on the doorstep of his residence in Eaton Place by two young men who gave the names of James O'Brien and James Connolly.

The assassin had loitered about waiting an hour for his return from unveiling memorials to the men of the Great Eastern Railway who fell in the war. When he came from his automobile, Field Marshal Wilson walked up the steps and the men fired several shots at him from close range, three of which took effect, one in the chest, one in the leg and the third in the wrist. The Field Marshal died before he could be taken into the house. His horrified wife heard the shooting and rushed out to find her husband's body, dressed in full uniform, lying in a pool of blood.

This crime was immediately inevitably lined in the public mind with the political assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Thomas H. Burke, the Under-Secretary, in Phoenix Park, Dublin, in 1882. The first impression was in a measure confirmed when Scotland Yard made public the names of the murderers and declared that Connolly had a letter in his possession indicating he was a member of the Irish Republican Army.

The assassin fled several hundred yards before their capture with police and civilians pursuing foot and in motors.

In the course of the running fight two of the policemen and a chauffeur were wounded. The men were finally overpowered after a hard struggle, the police armed only with truncheons, showing great bravery in tackling men with formidable army guns. The crowd closed in on them and would probably have beaten them to death if killed there, but for the protection afforded by the police. They were taken to a nearby police station, and later they were removed to Scotland Yard.

From an eye-witness the following details were obtained. The assassins lay in wait outside the Field Marshal's house and levelled their revolvers at him as he alighted from the car. With the courage and presence of mind of a true soldier he drew his sword when he realized he was being attacked and was about to plunge it into one of his assailants when a fusilade of bullets from the second man laid him low. The gunmen dashed off, followed by several infuriated citizens, who had witnessed the tragedy. Lady Wilson, hearing the shots and cries of alarm, emerged from her sitting-room and ran to her wounded husband's side. His sword lay by his side, his gloved hand still resting on the hilt. She grasped his hand and raised his head. "He is dying, he is dying!" she cried frantically to the group of laborers repairing a sidewalk in front of the house. "Isn't there someone who can get help? Cannot someone bring a doctor?"

The Field Marshal lay with no sign of life. Servants carried him into

Country Weekly Papers Exempt from Sales Tax

Ottawa.—The resolution to increase the sales tax by 50 per cent was adopted in the House. To the list of articles exempted from the tax were added self-rising flour and condensed, evaporated and powdered milk. It was also decided to exempt job printing offices doing a business of $10,000 a year or less from the operation of the tax. The idea is to exempt small country weeklies. His butler, a former soldier, felt the pulse and announced that he was dead.

Lady Wilson knelt beside him and hissing him exclaimed:

"Well, they have done their cruel work at last. But you have died like a soldier. God will be merciful to you."

Meanwhile outside the house the assassins were trying desperately to escape. One of the women who had witnessed the shooting, grasped a milk bottle, and struck one of the gunmen over the head, but he made off with his companion.

After their capture the men were taken to the Gerald Road police station, where the taller of the two, who apparently was the leader, lay on the floor owing to his injuries.

A civilian asked him: "Who are you?"

He replied: "I am an Irishman. I could have got more of you if I hadn't been afraid of hitting the kids."

The civilian said: "You are a dirty blackguard."

Trade Revival Only Remedy

British Government Cannot Advance Further Sums for Unemployed

London.—Premier Lloyd George received one of the largest delegations at No. 10 Downing Street, which has ever attended at the Premier's residence, comprising 126 persons, including some sixty members of the House of Commons, who appealed on behalf of the Boards of Guardians, which are in grave financial straits, owing to the heavy calls for unemployment relief. The Premier, while expressing sympathy, said he could not ask the House of Commons to sanction an increase in the Board of Guardians for unemployment relief based on local taxation. The only remedy he could see for the present unfortunate condition was a revival of trade.

Royal Welcome To Prince Of Wales On Return To England

London.—England gave an affectionate and joyous welcome to the Prince of Wales upon his return from his third imperial tour of the world. London, which he left eight months ago, greeted him with a fervor and spontaneously bestowing a royal ambassador of the Empire returning from a series of diplomatic triumphs.

Through his half-hour ride from Paddington Station to Buckingham Palace, the Prince was acclaimed by jubilant crowds, who showed up their salutations of affection and loyalty. He received from the public the response of endless stirring ovations on previous occasions. The Prince was profoundly affected by London's ringing welcome his pride and gratitude showing through tears of joy.

The Prince's reception by London's millions was exceeded in depth and emotion only by the ardent family greeting when he stepped from the train. The King grasped him by both hands and the Queen embraced him with motherly affection. Princess Mary who was married during his absence, discarding stilted royal decorum, threw both arms around him, and hugged him. Dowager Queen Alexandra and other relatives embraced him. The Prince's greeting was effusive. Mr. Lloyd George returned the salutations with vigorous congratulations at the success of the Prince's tour.

After the Prince had shaken hands with the members of the cabinet and inspected the guard of honor with the King, a choir in the station sang, "God bless the Prince of Wales," the tuneful strains of the popular melody resounding throughout the Great Central Railway terminal. The Prince then entered an open carriage with the King and his two brothers,

Problem of Returned Soldiers

Widening of Scope of Royal Commission Agreed Upon

Ottawa.—Problems of the returned soldier were discussed in the House recently. The discussion arose on a motion for concurrence in the report of the royal committee on pensions and re-establishment, which was adopted without division.

Herbert Marler of St. Lawrence, St. George (Montreal) Chairman of the Committee, related at length its activities and its findings. He emphasized the great debt of Canada to the returned men but observed, too, that they were also citizens of Canada and on them devolved the duties of citizenship. And following Mr. Marler, Alfred Speakman, of Red Deer, Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Land Settlement, reviewed what was proposed in the way of assistance to soldier-settlers on the land. The aim of the scheme was sound, he asserted. The difficulty lay in changed economic conditions.

Subsequently came critics, J. T. Shaw (Progressive, Calgary West)—himself a war veteran—had an amendment to extend the scope of the royal commission to include the G.W.R.A., charges against the Pensions Board. Under Mr. Shaw's amendment the commission would have power to make a complete survey of existing re-establishment needs, and to investigate the questions of exchange and canteen funds. Mr. Shaw regretted that the special committee had made no definite proposals in regard to unemployment. He criticized limitations placed on returned soldiers' insurance.

From other members also came pleas that the scope of the proposed royal commission should be extended. Mr. Marler eventually agreed to a widening of the scope of the Royal commission, but decided to postpone "to investigate" exchange matters would entail a great deal of expense. He suggested that the debate be dropped. Mr. Shaw withdrew his amendment on this understanding.

British Government Asks Relationship of Canada to Plan

London.—In the House of Commons, P. A. Hurd, Coalition Unionist, asked whether the conference with the Canadian Government regarding an empire wireless chain, which was announced more than a year ago as about to take place had yet been held, and what was Canada's relationship towards the British post office's wireless scheme. Hon. H. P. Pease, Assistant Postmaster-General, replied that informal conversations only have so far taken place, but he added, the Canadian Government would shortly send two technical representatives to discuss the whole subject with the British Government. After discussions it would be possible to determine what awards of public service.

Questioned in the House on this matter, Right Hon. Austin Chamberlain, Government leader, said the present practice was for recommendations to be sent direct to the Premier by the different governmental departments.

Joseph Devlin, M.P. for Falls, Belfast, asked: "Will Mr. Chamberlain state who is charged for a baronetcy and what price has to be paid for knighthood?"

There was no answer to this question.

Says Britain's Air Defense Inadequate

London.—The owner of Canadian newspapers with regard to the inadequacy of Britain's air defense was reflected in the House of Commons when Major-General Seelye declared that the Royal Air Force reserve to be provided by civil aviation had almost entirely disappeared. Consequently, he said, the British defensive power in the air was dangerously low.
